The State Library of South Australia is custodian of records belonging to the following churches:

- Anglican SRG 94
- Baptist SRG 465
- Congregational SRG 95
- Methodist SRG 4
- Presbyterian SRG 123
- Society of Friends (Quaker) SRG 103
- Uniting Church in Australia SRG 198

Although the State Library does not hold the originals we do hold microfilm copies of some records belonging to the Adelaide Hebrew Congregation (SRG 162). The microfilm is in the Family History Area.

The State Library is committed to preserving these church records but does make them available for people to consult in the supervised Somerville Reading Room.

If a record is less than 30 years old it may not be copied without the permission of the church concerned.

Many of the Anglican Church records are available in the Family History Area on microfilm or microfiche. There is a booklet kept with the films explaining which records are available. A list is also available further down this page.

Contained in the Anglican Church records are the registers of Trinity Church later Holy Trinity Church. This was the first church in South Australia and for sometime the only church. Civil Registration began in 1842 in South Australia so the Holy Trinity Church records which begin in 1836 cover the first six years of the colony and prior to Civil Registration. Even if a family member was not Church of England it is worth looking in the Trinity Church records as they may have attended this church because there was no where else to go. These early records are available in bound volumes in the Family History Area.

For other denominations there are series lists available at the Reference Desk please ask the staff for help.

The State Library has a large collection of church magazines which may well contain references to birth, death and marriages and obituaries for members of the various churches. Please check the Library catalogue for more details.

There are various English parish registers contained in the Harleian Collection many relating to the London area. For information regarding these please refer to the Harleian link on the Family Historians page.
